FIVE DANCING BODIES DISCOVERED.

Search for a Missing Family Reveals the Fact That a Mother Had Hanged Her Four Children and Herself.

TOOK FIVE LIVES.

HARLAN, Ia., May 26.—This entire region is greatly excited at the discovery Sunday in the home of Mrs. Christiana Peterson, about 3 miles northwest of here, of the dead bodies of the woman and her four children. Mrs. Peterson lived on a farm just outside the city with her family, consisting of two boys and two girls. The father was some time ago adjudged insane by the county board and sent to the asylum. Since then little attention has been attracted to the family until Sunday. A neighbor, who had noticed the absence of anybody about the place for three or four days, determined to investigate.

In the cellar Mrs. Peterson and her four children were found hanging by ropes from one of the beams of the house. A little girl aged 4 stood with her toes touching the ground; near her was her sister, a 10-year-old child, hanging from the timber. A boy of 9, with one knee touching a wash-tub on which he had stood, was near by, and his brother, a year older, hung so low that his feet almost reached the earth. Near him the mother, half kneeling, was seen. All were quite dead. The children and mother were all neatly dressed, but none wore shoes. Their feet were only covered with the bottoms of the shoes.

The work had been done most deliberately. The smaller children were strung up to a rope which was fastened only by heavy spikes driven into the beam, but for herself and the elder children the woman had bored holes through the timber, so that there might be no question as to the rope holding. Evidently she had stood the children on wash-tubs and had then pulled the tubs beneath their feet, and as they choked and gasped in agony she rigged up her own gallows, and, leaping from the wash-tub which she used, choked to death. Her determination was witnessed in the fact that the body was found in a kneeling position, and had she so desired she could have saved herself by standing erect. All of the quintette were choked to death, and the younger children's appearance betokened a violent struggle for life after their executioner had begun her work.

All indications were that the bodies had been hanging for days, and when the coroner was summoned and examined into the matter he gave it as his opinion that the deaths had occurred as far back as Thursday morning. No trouble other than the confinement of her husband in the insane asylum is known as having been entertained by Mrs. Peterson. It was believed by some of her neighbors that she, too, was mentally unbalanced.

It is proposed to make it the greatest gathering of the kind ever known. These delegates were chosen to the peace conference to be held in Rome next November:

Robert Treat Paine, C. C. Bonney, Chicago; David Dudley Field, New York; Philip Carr, Philadelphia; Dr. W. A. Campbell, D. D., Richmond; Bishop Fitzgerald, Nashville; Dr. W. A. Wadsworth, Kalamazoo, Mich.; W. Patterson, Concord, N. H.; Jonathan Chase, Providence, R. I.; Justin Whiting, St. Clair, Mich.

GIVEN TO CHARITY.

Supreme Court Decision in the Mormon Church Case.

WASHINGTON, May 26.—The supreme court on Monday entered a final decree in the case of the late church of Jesus Christ of the Latter Day Saints of Utah directing the disposition of the property of the church and the application of the proceeds by the receivers to such charities and purposes of a lawful character as most nearly correspond with the original purposes for which it was set aside. The final decision in this matter had been delayed in order to give congress an opportunity to specifically name the method of disposition, should it desire, but in absence of such action by congress the court disposed of the matter as indicated.

Killed His Prisoner.

DEVIL'S LAKE, N. D., May 26.—Monday morning Ed Heerman, confined in the county jail, made a desperate attempt to escape, throwing some blind-stuff in Sheriff Wagner's eyes and striking him with an iron weapon in the face and knocking his revolver from his hand. The jailer picked up the pistol and shot Heerman through the body, death resulting in a short time. The jailer is under arrest.

Couch's Murderer Gets a New Trial.

TOPEKA, Kan., May 26.—Adams, now in jail at Wichita, sentenced to be hanged next month for the murder of Capt. William Couch, has been granted a new trial by the United States supreme court in Washington. Adams shot Capt. Couch, the famous Oklahoma boomer, on his claim near Oklahoma City last fall while attempting to hold it. The claim adjoins the city proper and is valued at over $100,000.

Skipped with Thousands.

NEW YORK, May 26.—Cornelius A. King, business manager for the Hinchell Bros', large brewing concern in Paterson, N. J., and a well-known citizen of that city, is announced to be a defaulter in $20,000. King had charge of the firm's business in New York and failed to turn over the cash. He disappeared a week ago.

Killed by the Pennsylvania Limited.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., May 26.—The limited on the Pennsylvania at about 8 o'clock Monday night dashed into a car-pier at the Erie crossing, near Latrobe, Westmoreland county. Particulars are very meager, as trainmen refuse to talk, except to say that they were not running at an extraordinary speed. Miss Mollie McNally, aged 18, was instantly killed; Miss Bertha McCreary was badly injured, and their companion, Richard Fox, was torn to pieces.

The New Land Court.

WASHINGTON, May 26.—It is stated in official circles that the personnel of the new land court as agreed upon by the president is composed of three republicans and two democrats, and that the republicans are ex-congressmen Payson, of Illinois; Turner, of Kansas, and Thompson, of Ohio. Judge Culbertson, of Texas, will undoubtedly be one of the democratic appointees.

KANSAS MOB VIOLENCE.

Farmers' Alliance Men Evict an Objectionable Tenant.

TOPEKA, Kan., May 26.—News has been received here of a remarkable attempt of the farmers of Jewell county to take the law concerning foreclosures into their own hands. Sunday night Jonas Kindesberger, a tenant representing a law firm in Jewell City, was driven from a farm in Washington township which has been sold under a mortgage foreclosure and compelled to flee the country. The original owner of the farm was Joseph Bennett, who had borrowed money through the Jewell City firm to make his first payment and put in his crop. When the notes fell due Bennett did not have the money to pay them and his place was sold by the sheriff. He refused to give possession and was ejected from the place by a deputy sheriff and a tenant representing the purchasers was given possession. Bennett is a member of the Farmer's Alliance. Sunday night thirty or forty masked men, with Bennett at the head, drove up to the place and requested the new tenant to leave. He refused to do so, whereupon revolvers were drawn and he was told that he could either leave at once or his dead body would be carted away. Bennett was then reinstated and still holds the place.

BAD NEWS FROM BRAZIL.

A Yellow Fever Scourge Claiming Its Victims.

BALTIMORE, Md., May 26.—The steamship Elvaston, Capt. Steele, of the Maryland line, Baltimore and Brazil, arrived in port Monday morning on her first trip from Santos. The captain and crew report a terrible yellow fever scourge as prevailing in Brazil at the time of their departure from Santos—April 25. Hundreds are reported as dead and dying in and about the port from which the vessel sailed, while statements received from other localities by Capt. Steele would indicate great suffering and loss of life. Soon after leaving Santos the captain and crew of the Elvaston were prostrated by the fever, and the ship was hoisted to ten days until other engineers and help could be secured. Second Officer Howe and Fireman Wardell died of the disease soon after sailing. The remainder of the crew recovered, but they will not return to Brazil.

ROBBED A GIRL OF $2,000.

The Charge on Which John Seeman and Kate Berry Were Arrested.

WICHITA, Kan., May 26.—Sheriff Cone arrested Monday morning John Seeman and Kate Berry, both of Scott county, Ill., on a charge of forgery and of embezzling $2,000 from Mary McCloskey, of the same place. When Mary McCloskey's father died a year ago he left his daughter $2,000. It was about which she was advised to consult with Seeman. Soon after the death of his old friend, Seeman, it is charged, forged the girl's name, drew all the funds and fled in company with Kate Berry, a half-sister of Mary's and a married woman. The two have eluded justice until now. Seeman admits having taken the funds and says he was robbed of most of the money recently in Fort Scott, Ark.

ROBBED AN EXPRESS OFFICE.

Burglars Blind and Gag the Agent at Carroll, Ia., and Robbed a Six-Room House.

CARROLL, Ia., May 26.—The office of the American Express Company was broken into Saturday night about midnight. The night agent was bound and gagged, and with a revolver at his head was forced to give up the key to the safe, which was rifled, and about $3,000 in cash and a lot of papers taken. The man can give no description of the burglars. He was released after being bound for nearly two hours. The express office is only about 20 feet from an all-night lunch house.

Cook Has Settled Up.

MILWAUKEE, May 26.—A special to the Evening Wisconsin from Hartford, Wis., says Charles E. Cook, the Chicago banker, who is wanted in Wisconsin on a charge of illegal banking, has settled with those who lost money by the closing of his banks at Hartford and Janesville last summer. He has agreed to turn over certain real estate to his creditors, who expect to realize about 75 per cent. by the transaction. The result of this will be the discontinuance of the criminal proceedings against him now pending in Chicago courts.

Bad Outlook for Iowa Miners.

OTTUMWA, Ia., May 26.—The situation among the striking miners of Iowa is rapidly approaching a climax. The ineffectual attempt to adjudicate differences at the Oskaloosa convention last week leaves the situation unchanged so far as the men are concerned, but the operators are showing a determination to work their mines at all hazards. At Fortbush about forty men are at work, and at other parts gradually increasing force is at work in the pits.

A Youthful Illinois Murderer.

VIENNA, Ill., May 26.—As a party of young men were returning from Sunday-school in Bancroft township, 8 miles west of here, Sunday evening an altercation arose between James Winchester and Winsted Elkins, aged 20 and 17 years respectively. Winchester drew a revolver and shot Elkins, the ball taking effect in the region of the heart. He died almost instantly. The youthful murderer was promptly arrested.

STANFORD AT THE HEAD.

Third Party Leaders Glad That the California Senator Will Be Their Standard-Bearer.

WASHINGTON, May 26.—The leaders of the third party movement here profess to have direct assurances that Senator Stanford, of California, is ready to put himself at the head of their movement with all that is therein implied, and that he will be the standard-bearer of the "people's party" in 1892. Some of the alliance leaders claim to be authorized to make public the alleged fact that Senator Stanford considers he holds his great fortune simply as "steward for the people."

HURLED BY A BLAST.

William Wilson Blown From His Blazing Home.

THE GOV. HARVEY HOUSE BURNED.

A Janesville Blacksmith's Life Saved by An Automatic Fire Alarm—He Lowers His Family From a Second Story Window With a Rope of Quills.

It was an old land-mark that was destroyed by the Shopiere fire Saturday evening. The two story brick building that went up in smoke was erected by Governor L. P. Harvey forty years ago. It was owned by La Fayette Allen, of this city, and the first floor was occupied as a general grocery store by the Shopiere Creamery and Milling Company, the store being in charge of Orton Gillies. The upper floor was occupied by William Wilson and wife as a residence. The building is a total loss, and was valued at about two thousand dollars. There was no insurance on the building, but an insurance of $1,000 on the stock. Mr. Wilson lost everything except one bed and a few papers stored away in a drawer which he threw out of the window. He estimates his loss at $500, with no insurance.

Mr. Wilson had a little experience at this fire which he will not soon forget. Fearful of his surrounding, he got an automatic electric fire alarm some weeks ago, placing the bell in his bedroom, the wires and thermostat in the hallway. This little device saved his life. A few minutes after twelve o'clock the thermostat set the bell ringing, waking Wilson and his wife. Their rooms were full of smoke. Jumping out of bed they rushed in their night clothes to the stairway, but the fire being right under the stairs their escape was cut off. Realizing the situation at once, Mr. Wilson twisted up bed blankets, tied them around his wife, and let her out of a window to the ground. She alarmed a neighbor, and a ladder was raised for Wilson to escape which he did. He went around to the front door, meeting Mr. Gillies who had just crossed the road. The front door was forced open but the fire was so hot nothing could be saved. Mr. Wilson again climbed the ladder and entered his room to save what he could. He threw out his bed and bedding, let down his bedstead and then undertook to move out his commode, one drawer containing valuable papers was handed out, and while he was moving the commode to the window an explosion occurred. Said he: "I heard the explosion from below, the great pressure of heat threw open my bed room door and I was blown right out of the window. By chance I struck the ladder about half way down, and slid down all right." Mr. Wilson's right hand and arm are burned to blister. His face is also badly burned, and his eye-brows burned away. He came to the city yesterday to buy new household goods, he being now employed in the village working at his blacksmith trade. His wife lost all her clothing except night dress.

A VALID LAW.

Decision of the Supreme Court in an Original Package Case.

WASHINGTON, May 26.—The United States supreme court on Monday decided that the original-package law passed by the last congress was valid and constitutional, and that it went into effect in all states where prohibitory laws prevailed without reenactment by the states of the laws by which they forbade the sale of intoxicating liquors within their boundaries, whether imported from other states or not. Chief Justice Fuller rendered the opinion of the court, and the bench was united in support of the conclusions to which he arrived, though Justice Gray announced that Justices Harlan, Brewer and himself did not concur in all the reasoning of the opinion of the court.

The case upon which the decision was rendered was that of John M. Wilkerson, sheriff of Shawnee county, Kan., appellant, vs. Charles A. Rahrer, brought here on appeal from the decision of the circuit court of the United States for the district of Kansas against the state. Rahrer was the original package agent at Topeka, Kan., of the firm of Maynard, Hopkins & Co., of Kansas City, Mo., and was arrested the day after the original package law went into effect. He claimed that the law was unconstitutional, and also that it could not go into operation until the state had repealed its prohibitory laws. Chief Justice Fuller in discussing the case remarked that the state by the adoption of the constitution of the United States surrendered certain features of their rights to regulate commerce in the productions of other states.

The court held that although the liquor in question arrived in Kansas prior to the passage of the act by congress it was not necessary for the state of Kansas to reenact its prohibitory law after the passage of the congressional act in order to shut out liquors in original packages. The supreme court reversed the action of the circuit court and remanded the case for further proceedings. The decision is accepted by the prohibitionists as favorable to their cause and a support of the state laws inasmuch as it reverses the action of the lower court which had ordered Rahrer's release.

TO-DAY'S ANNIVERSARIES

This Date in History—May 26.

725—The venerable Bede, pioneer Saxon and English historian, died; born 722.
 1044—Dr. Michael Ettmüller, eminent German physician, born.
 1703—Samuel Pepys died, his famous diary describes the common life of 1670 and later.
 1809—Francis Joseph Haydn, musical composer, died.
 1840—Admiral Sidney Smith, G. C. B., died.
 1844—Jacques Laffitte, eminent French banker and politician, died.
 1865—The civil war ended by the surrender to General Canby of General Edward Kirby Smith's command, including 10,000 rank and file; total surrendered regularly in six armies 95,654.
 1869—Gas works at Montreal, Can., exploded, destroying $1,000,000 worth of property.

CLEVELAND'S APPROPRIATION BILLS.

Grover Cleveland's howl in his Buffalo speech about the alleged "reckless and wicked extravagance" in our public expenditures, "caused the Rochester Post Express to look up the figures of the Garfield-Arthur and Cleveland administrations. The appropriation bills signed by Garfield and Arthur aggregated as follows:

1883	$25,428,117
1884	187,431,296
1885	137,451,358
1886	170,688,114
Total	$747,309,195

The bills signed by Mr. Cleveland footed up as follows:

1887	$209,620,383
1888	193,036,173
1889	245,029,173
1890	218,115,440
Total	$865,835,175

There is a difference of $118,431,662 in favor of Mr. Cleveland's immediate predecessors, and there is likely to be a good deal to interest Mr. Cleveland in the Harrison administration before it is ended.

SCHWEINFURTH STILL LIVELY.

Instead of discouraging Schweinfurth the attempts to break up the Rockford heaven seem to have given him a fresh start. The recent dispatches report him in Kentucky preaching his doctrines so powerfully as to convert nearly all the congregation of a Methodist church. It possessed not only a neat church edifice but a new school house, and the account indicates that both were given to the Lord as personated by the Illinois fellow. Kentucky is not a state where the people jump at novelities, whether in religion or other relations. If the Illinois claimant can capture churches in Kentucky as a body, it is not surprising that women in other sections can be fascinated or hypnotized into becoming angels in his paradise. The religious phenomena are hard to account for at times.

One of the curious features of the civil war in Chili is the division of sentiment among two American churches engaged in mission work. The Presbyterians are heartily in sympathy with the insurgent cause, whereas the Methodists are disposed to favor President Balmaceda, possibly because he has had his daughters educated in their schools and thereby contributed to their prestige. Whatever may be their political preferences these Protestant pioneers in the South are taking no open part in the deplorable conflict which is in progress.

The question of sidewalks is concerning several aldermen. They are determined to adopt some measure by which the common council may compel property owners to build and keep in repair sidewalks on all the public and frequented streets. The are also contemplating some experiments with cedar block sidewalks, many claiming the cedar blocks will prove the most convenient and durable walk that can be built. This question will be brought before the common council in some form at the next meeting.

In Milwaukee the chief of police refuses to detail a policeman to protect Salvation Army services from disturbance by rowdies, but sends half a dozen officers to protect a dance of the demi-monde from intrusion. The regard of the Milwaukee authorities for laws punishing disturbers of a religious meeting is deep and sincere.

It is hinted by several state papers that Governor Peck is secretly encouraging the attack of the Milwaukee Journal upon Mrs. Lynde and Mrs. Ginty in order to force them to resign and give him an opportunity to appoint their successors on the board of lady managers of the world's fair.

It is pleasing to learn that the government has taken some steps toward fortifying New York harbor. Plum Island is being appraised for condemnation as a site for a mortar battery. Our war preparations are, however, not in any anticipation of war.

The late Thomas Beaver, the mining and iron-working millionaire, of Danville, Penn., gave away much money for educational, religious and other public institutions during his life. A foundation of $150,000 for a public library in Danville was only one of his benefactions.

With a first class gas works and two electric light plants in Janesville, besides the district headquarters of the Standard Oil Company, there is no danger of being left in the dark by legislative blunders.

A man at Sioux Falls drank acornite in place of whisky. Prohibitionists tried to find a moral in it, but the whisky men insisted that if he had stuck to straight bourbon he would be alive to day.

Now that they are forbidden to drink whisky the Sioux are cultivating civilized tastes. In South Dakota Poor Lo has acquired a remarkable liking for lemon extract.

The price of rain in Rock county has fallen from $1 per drop to five cents a tank full. A vast deal of good was done to the county in bringing about this change.

Our morning contemporary should be a little more careful in firing scaram at the state fair. A democratic legislature is within range.

BADGER STATE TALK.

The man most affected by the closing of Beef Slough was Theodore Buchler, appointed lumber inspector of the district. Ordinarily the office is worth $6,000 to $10,000 per year, but now it is worth nothing.

General Simeon Mills, of Madison, is slowly sinking with the gripe and pneumonia, which tell on his 82 years.

Robert K. Boyd, whose suit against Eau Claire to annul $100,000 of improvement bonds went against him in the circuit court, has made a proposition to the city to discontinue further proceedings without costs to either party.

THE QUEEN BATHED IN BLOOD.

An Old Dutch Legend That Originated a Method of Punishment.

The Dutch who settled in Elizabethtown, N. J., in 1780, brought with them from the fatherland a mode of execution that was the result of an old Dutch legend, which relates that in olden times a reigning queen had a habit of bathing daily in human blood.

No method was then known of extracting all the blood from the body, so that hundreds of lives were daily sacrificed to satisfy her majesty's eccentric desire. As the danger of depopulating the whole country, the court folk conceived the idea of the "affrow," a wooden shell shaped like a woman and lined inside with hundreds of daggers.

The victim was placed inside, and by touching a spring trap the machine would close violently, and the unfortunate wretch would be pierced through and through with a hundred holes, through which the life's blood would quickly pass out. The blood would pass down through a pipe leading to the queen's bath tub, and when sufficient was in she would bathe. The machine sacrificed thousands of young maids and boys, whose blood the queen preferred to the blood of adults. Following the regime of carnage, the machine was used for the execution of criminals up to the eighteenth century, when it was discarded in this and the mother country.—N. Y. Press.

Agility of the Bear.

Bears, unless hungry or abused, are good-natured animals and make amusing pets. "When I was in the revenue service at Alaska," said a lieutenant, "we had a pet bear on the boat and we called him Winnie. He used to climb to the cross-trees, going up hand over hand by the ratlines. One day he ventured out in the yard-arm and there he stayed. We had to get a rope and haul him down. Once he vaulted over the head of our Chinese cook and went into the kitchen where he helped himself to sugar and butter. We had a tackling made for him much the same as a harness of a pet pug, and we would drop him overboard, with a rope attached, to take his bath. Once he landed in a native boat and nearly frightened the occupants out of their wits. He was as playful as a kitten, and although he sometimes disobeyed he was never treacherous or unkind. When he was lost or hid himself, as he often did, we would look in the dark till we saw two little balls of fire. These were his eyes, and gave him away every time."—Golden Days.

Invested a Dollar and Realized a Million.

Brown and his friend Perkins were talking about investments.

"Once I invested $1000 in real estate," said Perkins, "and doubled it in less than six months. That was the best investment I ever made. Pretty good, wasn't it?"

"I've done better than that," said Brown. "Two years ago I was told by all my friends that I was going into consumption, and I thought they were right about it. I had a dry, hacking cough, no appetite, my sleep came by fits and starts, and seemed to do me no good, and often there was a dull, heavy pain in my chest. I kept growing weaker and weaker, and at last night-sweats set in. I thought it was all up with me then. I had consulted two doctors and taken quarts of their medicine, and received no benefit from it. One day I happened to read something about Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and I made up my mind to give it a trial, but I didn't expect it would help me. I invested a dollar in a bottle of it, and it helped me from the first dose. It helped and it cured me, and when I compare my present good health with the miserable health of two years ago I think I am safe in saying that my investment was a much better one than yours. You can't reckon health by any measure; if dollars and cents; if you could I should say that I had realized at least a million from my $1.00 investment." "Golden Medical Discovery" is guaranteed to benefit or cure in all diseases for which it is recommended or money paid for will be refunded.

FOR A MILLION.

Another Shoe House is Forced to Assign.

Boston, Mass., May 26.—The failure of Potter, White & Bailey, the big boot and shoe manufacturers, was announced here Monday afternoon. Following so closely upon the suspensions of the Davis Shoe Company here and the Hill Shoe Company at Memphis, Tenn., the announcement caused great excitement in trade and financial circles. George S. Bulant, president of the Revere bank, William Henry Allen, of the firm of Allen, Field & Lawrence, and Edward H. Dunn, of the firm of Dunn, Green & Co., are named as assignees. The liabilities are placed at above $1,000,000, and the assets are not known definitely, but are placed at nearly $1,000,000. The firm has done a business of about $2,000,000 a year and its credit has stood among the highest in Boston. For this reason the suspension came like a thunderbolt to all, and it was all the more a surprise because over their own signature the firm Saturday last in the daily papers denied the report that their liabilities to the Hill Shoe Company of Memphis, Tenn., were $198,000, or that the failure of that company would seriously cripple them. Of the causes that brought about the failure little definitely can be said, for the junior member of the firm, speaking for the others, said that he could make no statement at present. The assignees had little more to say, for the failure was an entire surprise to them as well as to others, and they had not had the firm's standing fully laid before them. The firm has manufactured through W. J. M. Bent, Cohasset, and A. N. Tate & Sons, Farmington, N. H., and until within two months through M. N. Arnold, of North Andover.

A large portion of the trade has been south and west with the "Rent" brogan, the finer shoes being from the other factories. It is believed on the street that the falling off in this western and southern trade had much to do with the failure, though the firm was supposed to be doing a good business elsewhere. It is also believed that the Hill and Davis failures had much to do with this failure.

BARDISLEY'S METHODS.
 PHILADELPHIA, May 26.—The deeper the probe is inserted into the robbery of the city treasury by John Bardisley and the reckless banking system carried on here in the Keystone and Spring Garden banks the worse the scandal appears. The revelation made before the city council's investigating committee showed that Bardisley deposited the state moneys in the banks in his own name, which related that in olden times a reigning queen had a habit of bathing daily in human blood.

Interest on them and that he collected the interest every month in cash. The morning the Spring Garden bank failed President Kennedy sent to Bardisley $47,000 in collaterals, which the latter has not returned for John W. Moffly, president of the Manufacturers' national bank, also spring a surprise on the committee by stating that his bank allowed Bardisley an interest of 8 per cent. on his individual deposits, which, however, he (Moffly) believed to be state funds. Ten days ago Mr. Moffly said Bardisley drew $25,000 in cash from the bank. This was an unusual thing to do. It was intimated to the committee that two days afterward President Marsh, of the Keystone bank, disappeared. No trace of Marsh has yet been found. Two more charges were lodged against Bardisley Monday, and his bail was increased to $50,000. He is still confined to his house in a critical condition, with detectives watching him.

Monday afternoon Attorney General Hensel had an affidavit prepared and presented to Magistrate Pole charging John Bardisley with having collected $307,694 belonging to the state of Pennsylvania and failing to account for the same, although lawful demands had been made therefor by the proper state officers. Magistrate Pole thereupon increased Bardisley's bail from $25,000 to $50,000. Two detectives have remained in a room adjoining Mr. Bardisley's bedroom since Saturday night, when the first warrant was served. In view of Bardisley's present condition it is hardly likely that any effort will be made to secure bail, but if bondsman are presented the watching detectives will be withdrawn from the house. The commitment was given to Chief Woods with instructions in case Mr. Bardisley is able to be out before Friday to take him into custody unless the $50,000 bail be furnished.

The governor threw a bomb into the camp Monday night by appointing W. Redwood White, a prominent and wealthy democrat, as city treasurer pro tem. Believing they had the right to elect in the city council and by the county commissioners the republicans had decided upon Richard C. Sellers, business manager of the Philadelphia Record, for treasurer. The result of this action of the governor is that the two parties will fight it out in court for the treasuryship. Gov. Pattison proposes to make a battle among the dry bones of the banks. He said that he intends an investigation into all the depositories of state funds. This will make another crash among some of the country banks, whose capital is the state funds.

Lamentable Termination of Judge Houk's Career.

THE TENNESSEE CONGRESSMAN DEAD.

He Swallows a Solution of Arsenic, Mistaking It for Water—David Butler, Nebraska's First Governor, Drops Dead.

DEATH OF JUDGE HOUK.
 KNOXVILLE, Tenn., May 26.—Congressman Houk died Monday morning at 6 o'clock of heart failure, caused by accidentally swallowing a solution of arsenic. The poison was swallowed Sunday afternoon at the drug store near his residence. He called at the store, bought some cigars and asked for a drink of water. He was given him. He remained about the store for some minutes, going behind the counter where the prescription clerk was busy compounding a prescription and not noticing Judge Houk's movements. Going to the clerk's side and pointing to a covered glass on the counter Judge Houk asked: "What is that stuff in that glass? It don't taste very good. Is it a poison?" "Great heavens!" exclaimed the clerk, "you did not drink from that glass, did you? Why, judge, that glass contains enough arsenic to kill half a dozen men. Houk had swallowed part of the contents, thinking he was drinking a second glass of water. He was stricken with terror and begged the clerk to give him something to save him. The clerk at once prepared a mustard emetic and in a few seconds Houk was vomiting freely. A physician was immediately summoned and other emetics administered. He was then conveyed to his residence and a stomach pump was used until the physicians decided that no more arsenic was in his system. At 10 o'clock he was thought beyond danger and was resting quietly. The physicians called several times during the night, finding him in good condition, and at 6 o'clock a. m. his son Elmer, who had remained awake all night in his father's room, went to breakfast. He left Mr. Houk asleep, breathing naturally. Twenty minutes later a servant was sent to the room and on returning reported that the patient looking very strange. Members of the family rushed to his room to find him gasping for breath, and in a few minutes he was dead. Physicians were summoned, who pronounced the cause of his death to be heart failure, brought on by excitement and exhaustion induced by swallowing the poison. The coroner's jury rendered a verdict in accordance with these facts. Judge Houk Sunday night exonerated the prescription clerk from all blame, saying that the swallowing of the poison was accidental and resulted from his own carelessness.

DEATH OF JUDGE HOUK.

Mr. Houk was a native of Steyer county, Tenn., and had almost completed his 55th year. He attended school but three months during his lifetime, but after the close of his daily labors as a cabinetmaker devoted himself to study until, in 1820, he began the practice of the law in which he continued until the secession of his state, when he entered the union army as a private August 9, 1861. In April, 1863, after he had become colonel of the 49th Tennessee infantry, ill health compelled him to resign. He was engaged in newspaper work for a year following, but in 1866 resumed practice at the bar. Mr. Houk was a member of the Tennessee constitutional convention of 1865, served one term as judge of the seventeenth circuit court of Tennessee; was for a time a member of the southern claims commission; represented his state in the national republican conventions of 1872, 1880, 1884 and 1888 and was seventh elected to congress. He was on the republican electoral tickets in 1864 and 1876.

DEATH OF NEBRASKA'S FIRST GOVERNOR.

OMAHA, Neb., May 26.—David Butler, the first governor of Nebraska and a prominent politician, dropped dead at his residence in Pawnee City Monday of heart failure.

Butler has played a prominent part in the political history of Nebraska since his advent in 1858. In many respects his career has been sensational. He was born at Bloomington, Ind., and after losing a fortune in the financial crisis of 1857 he removed to Nebraska. His fortune was immediately rebuilt in the cattle business and he became a prominent figure in the state politics, being an uncompromising republican and free-state advocate and an ardent opponent of the territorial administration of Lincoln. In 1861 Butler was a member of the territorial legislature, and during those tumultuous periods was an aggressive and influential member of the important part in the new people's party movement, as he was prominently mentioned for office.

MYSTERY OF THE FRANKLIN.

Jules Verne's Contribution to Our "Possible Cases" Series.

A Story of Love of Crime—Captain Brangan's Possible Disappearance—Discovered After Many Years by His Faithful Wife.

Copyright, 1891.

Capt. John Brangan had kissed his wife and child a last goodbye and as Dolly had reached up to take her ten months-old babe from her husband's arms she had seen on their little Wat's cheeks the tears which had gone with that last kiss. It was the morning of March 15, 1875, and the good ship Franklin loaded with a mixed cargo for Calcutta drew slowly out of the harbor of San Diego. Capt. John was one of the favorite employees of the rich shipping house of William H. Andrew. It was to be the Franklin's first voyage, and Mr. Andrew had made choice of Brangan to command her, he being in the opinion of all the most trustworthy officer attached to the fleet of merchant ships which stood for nearly an hour watching the Franklin, until her hull had disappeared from view and her grand spread of snow-white canvas had dwindled to the size of a sea gull on the distant horizon. At last it faded away completely, and Dolly permitted her cousin Jane, the wife of Len Brunker, to lead her away. The nurse, carrying the babe, walked beside the heavy-hearted mother. Brunker followed at quite a distance, and there was a hard and unsympathetic look upon his face. He was a man who kept the world at a distance except when, to further some of his wild and unscrupulous money-making schemes, he admitted a few of his fellow-beings into his confidence, for which they invariably died dearly. His reputation was unsavory, his name having been connected both in Boston and New York with several questionable transactions.

As he followed the three women a close observer would have noticed that the muscles of his face twitched nervously and that his small, steel-blue eyes were fixed upon a metallic gleam as they looked out over his back, his shaggy eyebrows.

"Cheer up, Dolly," said Jane, as they walked along. "John will soon be back with us again. On the trial trip the Franklin proved herself to be the swiftest clipper in the Andrews fleet. I wager you'll see her back in San Diego harbor within six months."

Dolly's heart was too full to let her reply to these cheerful words.

"Six months!" almost hissed Brunker, as he walked with his slight Mephisto limp behind Dolly Brangan. "That remains to be seen."

It was the first voyage that Capt. John had been called upon to make since the birth of little Wat, and he had found it very hard to separate from those two loved beings, but in the splendid clipper ship turned her head to the southwest the comforting thought had come to him that he may many years he would be able to give up the sea altogether, as Dolly's uncle, Edward Starter, a very wealthy landowner of western Tennessee, was well along in years and Dolly was his sole heir and next of kin.

On the eighth day after the Franklin was spoken by the Boundary, Ellis master of the Andrew fleet. Capt. Ellis had exchanged a few words with Capt. Brangan, but as a heavy gale was blowing the two vessels had not least, transfer her to an asylum. Ey and the old sailor. He had shipped on a vessel bound for some European port; it was a three-master—the California—and would be absent months. And in order to convince Mrs. Brangan of the truth of his statement, the clerk had picked up a file of the shipping list. Dolly reached out to it mechanically. Suddenly her eyes fell upon the headline—March, 1875. She uttered a cry of despair and dashed out of the office. Her own strength sustained her. Swiftly and steadily she fled along the narrow sidewalk, until only the thought was to reach the business office of her husband's employers, to learn from Mr. Andrews' lips the full and terrible truth of which she now had but a bewildering glimmer.

"I know all—I know all! You have deceived me!" she exclaimed, wildly, as she burst into Mr. Andrews' presence. "I have been mad for four years! For four years, since the Franklin sailed; for four years no tidings of her have been received. She has gone down—lost—lost! I shall never see my husband again—never—never!"

Dolly staggered backward in a swoon. Mr. Andrew laid her tenderly on the sofa and messengers were hastily sent to find Dr. Bromley. When she returned to consciousness she burst out into the wild, lamenting wail: "Bromley encouraged her to unload her breaking heart."

"Yes, Dolly," he said, calmly, "we have but one thought to comfort you—that when the good ship Franklin went down Capt. Brangan met death, like a hero, that he was, with your name on his lips, your face before his eyes."

"But, dear Dolly," interposed Mr. Andrew, gently, "there is a silver—nay, I might almost say a gold lining to the black clouds overshadowing you. Your uncle has just died—accidentally shot by one of his companions while out hunting. His entire fortune, nearly two millions, comes to you."

Dolly appeared not to catch a syllable of this important piece of information. A deep silence reigned in the little group. It was broken by Dolly starting wildly up.

"It's mine, is it, Mr. Andrew, all this money?" she exclaimed, laying hold of the merchant's arm.

"Yes, Dolly, all yours," he said, calmly. "You're a millionaire twice over. I'll raise her right hand solemnly to you. Heaven, 'I'll put it to a good use.' I'll find Capt. John Brangan, for although you may think that he went down with the Franklin I say 'No, he's alive. I feel it—I know it!'"

On July 27 the Dolly-Hope, a fine screw steamer fitted out by the wealthy Mrs. John Brangan and placed under the command of Capt. Ellis, left the port of San Diego to fathom if possible the mystery which for four long years had hung over the disappearance of the clipper ship Franklin.

Capt. Ellis entered upon his task by visiting the Caroline islands, where he passed three months searching for some trace of the missing vessel. On December 1, 1881, at the Philippine group, after a thorough search, he discovered the wreck of the Franklin, reaching Horno March 20.

For two months he cruised among the adjacent islands offering large rewards for any proof that the Franklin had gone to pieces in these seas. The port of Batavia was next visited and on June 20 the Dolly-Hope sighted the island of Singapore. He then sailed for Java, where he was met by a steamer, and Capt. Ellis reluctantly gave orders to return to San Diego.

The voyage had lasted nineteen months, but in spite of Capt. Ellis' domestic life and unwearied efforts, the disappearance of the Franklin was wrapped in greater mystery than ever. Two months later, that is in March, 1883, six years almost to the day since the Franklin had sailed from the port of San Diego, there came a strange tale of the finding of a white man, who had been seen by one of the Sandwich islands in search of fresh water. So darkened by sickness and exposure had the man's skin become, and so tangled and matted were his hair and beard that the English sailors had had difficulty at first in persuading themselves that he was really a white man. He was found to be a white man, which accounted for his being made any efforts to escape from the native village where he was found. After several weeks of tender nursing the poor wretch had been encouraged to utter a few words. "It is supposed," continued the account, "that his name is Franklin, for he has repeated that name many times."

At last the mystery was solved. The man proved to be Capt. John Brangan, sole survivor of the crew of the ship Franklin, which had blown up in 1875 on its twenty-first day out from San Diego, and it was strongly suspected that the ship's destruction was due to an infernal machine shipped among its cargo by one of the crew.

Then she suddenly fixed her gaze upon the water, leaning forward and peering down at the glassy surface of the bay as if she would fathom its dark, impenetrable depths.

After the lapse of a few instants a pitiful cry burst from her lips, and she threw herself upon her knees on the deck, half moaning, half shrieking: "There, there—where my little Wat went down, my precious babe—there—I remember it all. I remember it now."

The cure was complete. Dolly Brangan had recovered her reason. So severe had been the shock, however, that she was prostrated for several days, and at times her mind wandered, but it was the delirium of fever, and not the dread insanity come again.

Almost her first question to Dr. Bromley was as to the length of time she had been out of her mind.

"For two months," replied the physician who was prepared for such an inquiry.

"Two months?" murmured Dolly, "only two months? Why it seems as if an age had passed over my head." And then she added with a deep drawn sigh: "Only two months? John is not here, is he? For it is only two months ago that he sailed. Has he been told that our dear little babe—"

"Yes," said Dr. Bromley, quietly. "Mr. Andrews has written him."

"At these words Dolly turned her large, dark eyes full upon the physician and asked:

"Where they received news of the Franklin?"

Dr. Bromley explained that the house had expected letters from Singapore, but that they had not arrived yet, that there was every reason to believe, however, that the Franklin would soon reach Calcutta, that even now they were waiting a dispatch to their agent to make this trip, and Dolly and Jane were soon on their way to the wharf, accompanied by little Wat and his nurse. The interview with Capt. Ellis was most comforting to Dolly. He was obliged to repeat the story of the meeting over and over again which he did not grow weary of.

On the trip back to her home, while Dolly, with little Wat in her arms, stood leaning against the low rail on the deck of the steam launch, that uneasy feeling of the helm hard upon it, to avoid colliding with a vessel crossing its bow, gave a sudden and violent lurch. Her skirts buoyed her up for a moment, and she clung, not without a visible effort, to the babe folded on her bosom.

Just as one of the deckhands came within arms' length of her, mother and child went down. When she rose to the surface little Wat was gone. The unconscious Dolly was tenderly lifted upon the deck of the steam launch while some of the best swimmers dived repeatedly in search of the babe. But all in vain. The strong current had caught and carried its little body far out of reach.

When Dolly came to herself and the realization of the awful calamity broke full and fair upon the wretched woman her mind gave way; not a glimmer of reason looked from her large dark eyes.

"Another life nearer old Starter's millions," muttered Len Brunker, when he was told of little Wat's death.

As Dolly's mania was not characterized by any tendency to violence, Capt. John's employers resolved that they would not for the present at least, transfer her to an asylum. Ey and the old sailor. He had shipped on a vessel bound for some European port; it was a three-master—the California—and would be absent months. And in order to convince Mrs. Brangan of the truth of his statement, the clerk had picked up a file of the shipping list. Dolly reached out to it mechanically. Suddenly her eyes fell upon the headline—March, 1875. She uttered a cry of despair and dashed out of the office. Her own strength sustained her. Swiftly and steadily she fled along the narrow sidewalk, until only the thought was to reach the business office of her husband's employers, to learn from Mr. Andrews' lips the full and terrible truth of which she now had but a bewildering glimmer.

"I know all—I know all! You have deceived me!" she exclaimed, wildly, as she burst into Mr. Andrews' presence. "I have been mad for four years! For four years, since the Franklin sailed; for four years no tidings of her have been received. She has gone down—lost—lost! I shall never see my husband again—never—never!"

Dolly staggered backward in a swoon. Mr. Andrew laid her tenderly on the sofa and messengers were hastily sent to find Dr. Bromley. When she returned to consciousness she burst out into the wild, lamenting wail: "Bromley encouraged her to unload her breaking heart."

"Yes, Dolly," he said, calmly, "we have but one thought to comfort you—that when the good ship Franklin went down Capt. Brangan met death, like a hero, that he was, with your name on his lips, your face before his eyes."

"But, dear Dolly," interposed Mr. Andrew, gently, "there is a silver—nay, I might almost say a gold lining to the black clouds overshadowing you. Your uncle has just died—accidentally shot by one of his companions while out hunting. His entire fortune, nearly two millions, comes to you."

Dolly appeared not to catch a syllable of this important piece of information. A deep silence reigned in the little group. It was broken by Dolly starting wildly up.

"It's mine, is it, Mr. Andrew, all this money?" she exclaimed, laying hold of the merchant's arm.

"Yes, Dolly, all yours," he said, calmly. "You're a millionaire twice over. I'll raise her right hand solemnly to you. Heaven, 'I'll put it to a good use.' I'll find Capt. John Brangan, for although you may think that he went down with the Franklin I say 'No, he's alive. I feel it—I know it!'"

On July 27 the Dolly-Hope, a fine screw steamer fitted out by the wealthy Mrs. John Brangan and placed under the command of Capt. Ellis, left the port of San Diego to fathom if possible the mystery which for four long years had hung over the disappearance of the clipper ship Franklin.

Capt. Ellis entered upon his task by visiting the Caroline islands, where he passed three months searching for some trace of the missing vessel. On December 1, 1881, at the Philippine group, after a thorough search, he discovered the wreck of the Franklin, reaching Horno March 20.

For two months he cruised among the adjacent islands offering large rewards for any proof that the Franklin had gone to pieces in these seas. The port of Batavia was next visited and on June 20 the Dolly-Hope sighted the island of Singapore. He then sailed for Java, where he was met by a steamer, and Capt. Ellis reluctantly gave orders to return to San Diego.

The voyage had lasted nineteen months, but in spite of Capt. Ellis' domestic life and unwearied efforts, the disappearance of the Franklin was wrapped in greater mystery than ever. Two months later, that is in March, 1883, six years almost to the day since the Franklin had sailed from the port of San Diego, there came a strange tale of the finding of a white man, who had been seen by one of the Sandwich islands in search of fresh water. So darkened by sickness and exposure had the man's skin become, and so tangled and matted were his hair and beard that the English sailors had had difficulty at first in persuading themselves that he was really a white man. He was found to be a white man, which accounted for his being made any efforts to escape from the native village where he was found. After several weeks of tender nursing the poor wretch had been encouraged to utter a few words. "It is supposed," continued the account, "that his name is Franklin, for he has repeated that name many times."

At last the mystery was solved. The man proved to be Capt. John Brangan, sole survivor of the crew of the ship Franklin, which had blown up in 1875 on its twenty-first day out from San Diego, and it was strongly suspected that the ship's destruction was due to an infernal machine shipped among its cargo by one of the crew.

HE WILL FIGHT

Rev. I. J. Delo, Sharon's Warring Pastor, Is Determined.

HE MEANS TO STAY UNTIL PAID.

Some of His Flock Threaten to Evict Him.

BUT HE TELLS THEM TO BEGIN SOON.

A Hundred and Eighty Pound Preacher With a Square Jaw and a Divided Congregation Warring for the Possession of a Church.

If Sharon Lutherans want their parsonage they must come and get it. So says Rev. I. J. Delo, and 180 pounds of muscle back up his occupancy.

Mr. Delo is a man who looks able to take care of himself almost anywhere. His jaw closes with the firmness of a bench-vise, and his eyes have lines about them that betoken determination.

But Pastor Delo does not have all the fighting blood on his side.

The Lutheran church is one of the most important in Janesville's Walworth county suburb. It numbers among its members many prominent business men, and more than one whose lips close just as firmly as those of the pastor.

The church, however, was "in it."

To a Gazette representative who visited Sharon to get an insight into the affair, it was explained that the trouble originated in the choir, when a reorganization was had and a couple of alleged troublemakers or turbulent members were displaced. These expelled members appealed to the pastor for re-instatement. He declined to lend them any assistance. They then marshaled their forces, he claims, and commenced intriguing to secure his removal.

The Lutheran church is one of the most important in Janesville's Walworth county suburb. It numbers among its members many prominent business men, and more than one whose lips close just as firmly as those of the pastor.

The choir, however, was "in it."

To a Gazette representative who visited Sharon to get an insight into the affair, it was explained that the trouble originated in the choir, when a reorganization was had and a couple of alleged troublemakers or turbulent members were displaced. These expelled members appealed to the pastor for re-instatement. He declined to lend them any assistance. They then marshaled their forces, he claims, and commenced intriguing to secure his removal.

TOO GOOD.

"He's awfully good," said the maiden fair, "O, awfully good—just think."

He doesn't make me do as I want, and he never was known to drink."

"No doubt," said her friend, "he must appear perfect itself to you."

But then he's a man, and I greatly fear He's quite too good to be true."

EGGS GOOD AS GOLD.

The Price of Hen Fruit Unusually High.

JANESVILLE GROWERS TROUBLED.

The Farmers They Formerly Banked on Are Now Selling in Chicago at an Advance of Three Cents Over Janesville Quotations.

The egg market just now is one item of household economy that interests nearly every one.

Why are eggs selling at so high figures, and scarce at that?

There are a number of reasons. Eggs are higher now than the have been at this season since 1882. One reason given is that meats are so high people are consuming more eggs, using eggs in place of meat.

Another reason is, there are not so many eggs in the market. Since January 1, it has been with much difficulty that grocerymen and provision dealers could find chickens for sale. They are not in the country.

There are hens enough to supply the ordinary demand for eggs, but there is a great demand for eggs in the east. The McKinley bill plays an important part in the advance price of eggs, and protects the American hen at the rate of five cents a dozen eggs, thus shutting out large quantities of eggs from Canada that formerly found a market in the United States.

Janesville grocerymen are now paying 12 cents a dozen and selling for 12 cents. Chicago parties are paying 16 cents a dozen in Chicago.

"We are not buying eggs now for packing," said a local dealer, "there is no money in the business when we have to pay such prices."

Country merchants are buying, however, and are shipping eggs to the Chicago market, which cuts off considerably the supply that formerly found market in this city.

Reports from different market centers throughout the country show the price of eggs some three cents higher than at the same time last season. This is wholly attributable to the scarcity of eggs, made so, perhaps, by cutting off the Canadian supply, which formerly found good markets in our large cities. It is claimed that all the eggs now produced in the great northwest is not sufficient to supply the local demand in Chicago.

Conrad Brothers now have about twenty-five hundred cases in the cold storage warehouse, but will make no further packings as long as the present prices continue, they claiming there is no money in the business. One half of their warehouse has been leased by Gillies & Jones of Emerald Grove, who are storing large quantities for the fall and winter trade.

A general canvass among the local dealers led to the belief that the price of eggs will be reduced this week, but anything they will go still higher, until the stock of poultry is increased by farmers.

ACROSS THE DARK RIVER.

Dr. B. T. Sanborn.

Dr. Brigham T. Sanborn died at his home in Chicago, at half past eight o'clock this morning, aged 36 years, 6 months, and seven days.

Dr. Sanborn was born at Whitefield, Cowas county, New Hampshire. He came west with his parents in 1864. He graduated from the Bennett Medical college after a course of study with Dr. S. S. Judd, and opened an office in Janesville some years ago.

He continued to practice here until last September, when he removed to Chicago and opened an office at his residence on LaSalle avenue. He was a genial man and a successful practitioner, and his death will be mourned by a large circle of friends. He leaves a wife and an adopted daughter.

The remains will be brought to this city on the vestibule to-night. Arrangements have not yet been completed for the funeral.

WILL CUT OFF THE ALLEY.

Main Street Property Owners Plan Building the River.

There is trouble brewing in regard to the alley running from Court street north to Milwaukee street in the rear of the large business blocks. Some of the property owners are planning to extend their buildings back toward the river, in which case the alley will be blocked. The alley belongs to private property, in fact it is not an alley, but a driveway which has been used for some years by the business firms in the rear of their stores. In case the proposed buildings are extended, they would close up the driveway entirely, in which event those occupying stores near the center of the block would suffer many inconveniences.

FUNERAL OF MISS WARREN.

Services Held at the Third Ward Home This Afternoon.

Miss Elizabeth Warren, whose death has been mentioned in The Gazette, was the second daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John H. Warren, who, in the present sad event, for the first time have seen their family circle invaded by death.

In the summer of 1879, Dr. Warren himself then well known in Rock County—brought his family to this city and established here a new home. The daughter Elizabeth, possessed of a goodly presence, of culture, a kind heart, and a love of music, drew to herself friends and admirers, as well from the older and prudent, as from the young and confiding; and all these remained friends, and now tenderly sympathize with the family in the loss of the one member toward whom the home love inclined.

During her residence here, she gave much attention to music, was a member of Christ Church choir; and, to the very last, found her chief pleasure and solace in listening to vocal and instrumental music, and in passing an amateur's criticism upon the voices and the practice of those who kindly furnished the entertainment.

A little more than a year ago Miss Warren went to Ashville, trusting, as she thought she left, that the change from Wisconsin to the piney mountains of North Carolina might restore her impaired health. For a time the "new air," and the surroundings, seemed to benefit her, and she, and her friends were encouraged. Later, her mother, and older sister, Miss Julia, went to her, to care for and comfort her; and, later still, her brother, Doctor Benjamin H. Warren was there also. But healthful air and loving ministrations could at best but defer the "inevitable hour," and on Saturday, the 23rd, instant, she passed from this to the other life. Funeral services were held at the family residence this afternoon, the rector of Christ church, Rev. Arthur A. H. Barrington, officiating. Mrs. St. John, Mrs. Clark, Mr. Bladon and Mr. Vankirk assisted in the services, and M. M. Bostwick, R. M. Bostwick, C. E. Pierce, Elsworth Green, F. F. Prentice and E. D. McGowan, were pall bearers. The remains were interred in Oak Hill cemetery.

JANESVILLE FOLK IN EUROPE.

Ogden H. Fethers, Dr. Q. O. Sutherland and the Misses Sheldon Sail Soon.

Ogden H. Fethers will start to-morrow on a three months' visit to Europe. Mrs. Fethers is already across the water, having started last month. Mr. and Mrs. Fethers will be accompanied by J. V. Quarles and wife, and are likely to have as members of their party for a portion of the summer Senator and Mrs. John C. Spooner.

Misses Fannie and Margie Sheldon have engaged passage for Europe, and will sail June 20. They plan to spend a year in the old country, devoting much of their time to study in Germany.

Dr. Q. O. Sutherland, who went to Chicago yesterday to consult with physicians as to his condition, started for New York this morning, and will sail for Europe at once. The doctor's health has been failing for some time past, on account of over-work, and he was warned yesterday that he must give up work at once. After spending a short time in England and Scotland, the doctor will secure quarters at Berlin and will continue his summer hotel studies. From Berlin he will take short trips into Italy and Switzerland.

SIX HORSES TO DIE.

Thomas Hanlon's Animals to be Paid for by the State.

The state veterinarian having condemned six more horses belonging to Thomas Hanlon of Emerald Grove, the horses will be appraised and shot sometime to-morrow. Justice John Nichols of this city having appointed C. C. McLean, Daniel Ryan and George Charlton appraisers.

The appraisers are allowed to fix the value of each horse at a sum not to exceed fifty dollars, the state paying two-thirds of the price so fixed. This the appraisers are to do at the time the horses are killed. None of the horses condemned are afflicted with glanders, but all have been exposed, and are condemned in order to wipe out the disease.

Mr. Hanlon claims that some of his horses are worth at least one hundred and fifty dollars, and it is quite a hardship to him to have all his horses thus taken with scarcely no recompense. Many of his friends are subscribing to a fund to make his loss good.

A BRIGHT MAN'S DOWN-FALL.

Joseph Benway's Death and the Lesson It Taught.

Joseph Benway, who died last evening, came to Janesville from Massachusetts some fifteen years ago. He was then a steady young man, intelligent, capable and with bright prospects. He had been in the city some time, and had earned good wages. Family trouble made him unsteady, however, and he became a hard drinker. His thirst for strong drink often got the best of him, and finally made him a victim. His remains were taken to Waupun this afternoon for burial, he having a brother residing in that village, who came on to take charge of the body.

A New Tobacco Planter.

EVANSVILLE SPECIAL Note.

EVANSVILLE TRIBUNE.—An ordinary toad in an ordinary collar box ready for shipment to a friend in Chicago, was the cause of the gathering of an unusual number of the fair sex opposite our office between twelve and one o'clock, and they brought more rain as usual and to them be all praise.

Street Cars to the Cemetery.

Street cars will make regular half hour trips to the city cemetery on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons, the first car leaving the Myers house switch at 1 o'clock, provided the weather is fair. Should it be stormy the trips will be abandoned for the time.

Avoid very cold or hot baths in case of debility.

Great heat of the body is no objection to a bath, providing the respiration is not disturbed, nor the body in a state of fatigue.

Never take a bath so cold that fatiguing exercise is necessary to "get up reaction."

FIVE NEAR TO DEATH.

The Bergman Family Stricken With Diphtheria.

MUCH HARSH COMMENT IS HEARD.

The Complaint is Made That Contagion Was Spread Wantonly and That Most of the Deaths Were Thus Caused.—Caution to House Owners.

The diphtheria which developed on Western avenue last week was thought to have been wiped out after the death of the Bergman and Lutz children, but such is not the case. The Bergman family is again sorely afflicted. The family consists of seven children, and this morning five were reported to the health officer as being down with the disease, and the home and family were put under strict quarantine regulations.

Mr. Linnen on Milwaukee street, is now getting out of danger," said Health Officer Robinson this afternoon to a Gazette reporter, "and the cases in the Bergman family on Western avenue are the only cases I know of in the city. I had hoped that we had the disease entirely wiped out. People must be careful, however, and not expose themselves. Don't excite the people, but tell them to keep their premises clean, their houses well ventilated, and I think there will be no danger. I may be compelled to make an example of one or two individuals to enforce upon them the necessity of obeying the quarantine regulations."

Harsh comment is heard about the city on the action of those who disregarded quarantine laws. It is insisted that most of the deaths that have occurred during the last week have been caused by the spreading of contagion in this way.

THIEVES IN MILTON.

Burglars Work Hard for Watches and Money.

MILTON, May 26.—Burglars got in their fine work here last week. The residence of E. Crandall and R. Richardson were visited, entrance being effected by the use of nippers on the door keys in a professional manner. At Mr. Crandall's they secured three dollars in cash and a pocket knife; and at Mr. Richardson's fifteen dollars and a valuable gold watch. There is no prospect of the apprehension of the thieves.

D. T. Hudson is failing very fast and his death at any time would not be an unexpected event.

"Messrs," not "Misses" Root and Holmes, were knighted by the queen. Rev. F. W. Hullinger occupied the Congregational church pulpit Sunday morning and evening.

The graded school was closed Friday to allow the teachers to attend the convention at Janesville.

W. A. Thompson, of the Midland Publishing Co., Madison, spent Sunday and Monday here, as the guest of Rev. E. D. Farnham and family.

Dr. James Mills, of Janesville, was here on professional business Saturday. Professor J. B. Borden came up from Clinton, and spent Saturday and Sunday at home.

H. H. Harris and wife of the Bower City, were visitors here last Sunday. Joseph Davis has received a pension under the disability law.

Professor L. B. Hudson, of Bloomington, Illinois, is in town, called here by the dangerous illness of his father, D. T. Hudson, who is failing fast.

There was a large delegation of Milton fishermen at Newville Sunday. Mrs. J. B. Anderson carried off the honors with a five-pound walleye pike, and there was no guess-work
